

TR2 TACTICAL RESPIRATOR

HARMFUL PARTICULATE PROTECTION

THE VENTUS TR2 RESPIRATOR is a low-profile, one size-fits-all mask developed to protect the user's respiratory system from harmful particulate exposure. Designed in collaboration with Special Forces Operators, the mask filters harmful metals and particles prevalent in tactical operations including close quarter battle ranges, breaching and explosive force entry, and actions in toxic environments. Repeated exposure to these harmful particles will increase health risks including lead poisoning, silicosis, lung cancers and neurotoxicity. The Ventus TR2 mask is an essential piece of protective kit for the Warfighter.

KEY FEATURES

- Quarter mask design seals above the chin specifically allowing for helmet chinstraps to be worn on the chin and not on the lower jaw or neck like competitor respirators
- The quarter-mask design and flexible universal seal accommodate all common ballistic eyewear
- Mask affixes to the ballistic helmet through the use of side rail clips and straps
- The central exhalation valve directs exhaust away from the head to eliminate fog risk, while providing low burden air exhalation
- Milspec communications compatible, the mask encompasses a dynamic microphone, mounted with a right or left orientation
- Filters hazardous airborne particulate: aerosolized lead, mold, concrete dust, lead paints, asbestos, frangible ammo and more
